GRID

Monitoring signals

Recording, qualifying and following the signals of a sector or territory

Useful monitoring distinguishes the observed fact from its interpretation and ranks signals by intensity and horizon. For each signal, the grid sets out the source, type, fact, intensity, horizon, implication for the organisation and follow-up.

Period covered :

Scope of monitoring :

1. Reliability of the source

– Official: published text, document of an administration or public body.
– Open, verified: public information cross-checked with a second source.
– Open, unconfirmed: isolated public information, flagged as such.

2. Type of signal

– Legislation or regulation; public programme or strategy; call for projects or support scheme; economic data; announcement by a player; infrastructure project; international agreement or environment.

3. Intensity

– Low: isolated signal, with no direct effect identified on the organisation.
– Medium: confirmed signal, possible effect on an activity, market or project.
– High: confirmed signal calling for a decision or adaptation by the organisation.

4. Horizon

– Short: under six months; medium: six to eighteen months; long: beyond eighteen months.

5. Follow-up

– To watch; to explore further; in-depth question; to bring to management's attention.
